

On display in the Lied Art Gallery, these raw wooden sculptures represent the geometric shapes artist and Arts & Sciences senior Mary Ensz incorporated into the contours of the human body, most specifically the female form. Starting as a symbol for both growth and disclosure, these figures are meant to be ambiguous dependent on the viewer's interpretation. Photo by Kathleen Ambre.